Film Studies Development: latest news (September 2015)

Reminder: the final assessment for the current GCSE and AS/A level specifications will be Summer 2018.

Background
You’ll be aware that in April 2015, after lengthy discussions between Ofqual and Awarding Organisations, GCSE and GCE Film Studies were amongst some 40 qualifications which were allowed to continue to the initial stages of development for first teaching from September 2017. Those initial stages were closely monitored by DfE and Ofqual to ensure that the subjects met their strict conditions (DfE are responsible for the content of specifications and Ofqual for assessment).

The consultation stage
After a lengthy process, DfE and Ofqual have now confirmed that the subject content and assessment objectives for both GCSE and GCE Film Studies can proceed to the public consultation stage (planned to be open from 10 Sept 2015 – see DfE and Ofqual websites). Although technically qualifications can be withdrawn throughout the development process, Film Studies is now in a much stronger position to be developed for first teaching from September 2017. Assuming all does run smoothly through the next stages, new, accredited specifications are planned to be available for teachers in the Autumn of 2016.

Stakeholders
A significant group of stakeholders was required to shape the development of the subject content – effectively, the minimum content which Awarding Organisations must include in their specifications. We are very grateful to those representatives from universities, the Bfi, the MEA, the British Film and Television school, Creative Skillset and teachers who gave up time to advise on the development of the subject content. We’d like to thank the chair of this group in particular, Professor Phil Powrie, University of Surrey and chair of the British Association of Film, Television and Screen Studies, for the very supportive role he played.

Public Consultation
The subject content (which DfE is responsible for) and the assessment objectives (Ofqual's responsibility) should be open for consultation on DfE’s and Ofqual’s websites from 10 September to 5 November. We’d like to encourage you to respond!

What you’ll see in the subject content
Both the Subject Content and the Assessment Objectives are formal documents and won’t read like a specification. The Subject Content provides the framework for the minimum content which Awarding Organisations must include in their specifications. The Assessment Objectives set the framework for assessment with percentages allocated to each.

As with all subject developments, you’ll realise that reformed qualifications are to be made more demanding, particularly at GCSE (see below).

Key changes from the previous specifications

GCSE
- there will be a significant increase in demand with the new specification (in line with all reformed GCSE qualifications)
- GCSE students will be required to study one independent US film alongside mainstream US films, at least one British film and one non-English language film
- there will be a historical dimension to film study, with students studying at least one film produced between 1930 and 1960 and another between 1961 and 1990
- all films for assessment will be set by the Awarding Organisation and will have to meet a 'quality threshold'
- controlled assessment – to be called 'non-examination assessment' in reformed specifications – will be 30% (20% for the production and 10% for its evaluation)
- production work must be individual and will be limited to filmmaking and screenwriting.

A level and AS
- there will be a noticeable increase in demand with the new specification - more aspects of film will be compulsory
- there will be a requirement to study an increased range of films reflecting both the history of film and its global nature
- all films for assessment will be set by the Awarding Organisation and will have to meet a 'quality threshold'
- internal assessment – to be called 'non-examination assessment' in reformed specifications – will be 30% (20% for the production and 10% for its evaluation) at both A level and AS
- the AS is a separate qualification which does not count towards the two year A level
- the structure of the AS will however overlap with the first year of a two year A level and will thus be 'co-teachable' with it
- production work must be individual and will be limited to filmmaking and screenwriting.

Outline timetable for Development

Sept and Oct 2015
Initial stages of WJEC's Eduqas specification development: GCSE, A level and separate AS

Nov and Dec 2015
Consultation with teachers over initial ideas for the specifications through CPDs and its website
Awarding Organisations respond to results of DfE and Ofqual public consultation on Subject Content and Assessment Objectives.

Feb 2016
DfE and Ofqual confirmation on whether the subject's development can be completed for first teaching in Sept 2017.

May (tbc) 2016
Specification & Sample Assessment Materials submitted to Ofqual for Accreditation (tbc)

Autumn 2016
Accredited specification made available to teachers, schools & colleges

Autumn 2016 & Easter 2017
Events and CPDs to launch new specifications

Sept 2017
First teaching of new specifications (first assessment of GCSE and A level, Summer 2019/first assessment of separate AS, Summer 2018)

Summer 2018
Final assessment of current, 'legacy' specifications (GCSE and AS/A level)